

Mila Kunis, born on August 14, 1983, in Chernivtsi, Ukraine, is a celebrated actress known for her versatile performances in film and television. Her family emigrated to the United States when she was seven, seeking better opportunities. This transition marked the beginning of Kunis's journey in the entertainment industry, which would eventually catapult her to international fame.

Kunis first gained recognition for her role as Jackie Burkhart on the hit sitcom That '70s Show, which aired from 1998 to 2006. Her comedic timing and charming presence quickly endeared her to audiences. She later showcased her dramatic skills in films such as Black Swan (2010), for which she received critical acclaim and multiple award nominations, including an Academy Award nod. The film was a box office success, grossing over $330 million worldwide and solidifying her status as a serious actress.

In addition to Black Swan, Kunis starred in various successful films, including Friends with Benefits (2011), Ted (2012), and Bad Moms (2016), each contributing significantly to her box office appeal. Her films have collectively grossed over $1 billion, reflecting her strong marketability and audience draw.

Kunis has received several accolades throughout her career, including a Teen Choice Award and a People's Choice Award. Her work has been recognized by industry peers, showcasing her talent and versatility.

On a personal note, Kunis has been in a long-term relationship with actor Ashton Kutcher, whom she married in 2015. The couple shares two children, and their relationship has garnered considerable media attention, often celebrated for its authenticity and warmth.

In summary, Mila Kunis's journey from Chernivtsi to Hollywood exemplifies her determination and talent, making her one of the most beloved figures in contemporary cinema.